The Defence does not constitute a valid Defence against the Claim under the Equality Act. It gives no valid grounds for defence and holds no real prospect of success.

Further, the defendants have abused the Court process. They have failed to engage in pre-action procedures: they did not respond to my Letter before Action of 18th September. They have failed to respond to my Subject Access Request under Section 7 of the Data Protection Act for relevant CCTV evidence; eliciting criticism from the Information Commissioner, and are unable to furnish the CCTV evidence as it has been deleted in the meantime.

The defendants have failed to investigate the incident in a timely manner. It is ten weeks since my Letter before Action, yet the defendants have still failed to respond on the issues at the heart of my claim. They still rely upon the right to submit an amended Defence due to "ongoing investigations". They have not applied for the right to do so or supplied the amended Defence, over three weeks after filing their Defence.

It is clear that the Defendant's Statement of Claim should be struck out by the Court.
